MERRIMACK COLLEGE
North Andover, Massachusetts.

HISTORY OF MERRIMACK

As the tenth graduating class we were fortunate to see and take part in the growth of Merrimack College, which has the distinction of being situated in two typical New England towns, North Andover and Andover, Massachusetts, both rich in the tradition of education.

What courage it must have taken for the Haverhill labor-management group, under the direction of Mr. J. Leo Cronin, to foresee, after countless interviews with G.I.'s, the need of a college north of Boston and to present the plan before Cardinal Richard J. Cushing.

Cardinal Cushing was receptive to the suggestion and, as usual, he was ready to meet the demands to give a Catholic education to all those seeking it.

Under the leadership of Reverend Vincent A. McQuade, O.S.A., Ph.D., the plans of the college were under way.

GUILD HALL

After considerable deliberation, the site for the new college was selected. A temporary building, Guild Hall, was to be erected between Elm and Haverhill Streets in Andover, and a permanent campus was to be located on Turnpike Road in North Andover.

CASCIA HALL

Sound Planning, New Ideas Show Results

Cascia Hall, named for St. Rita of Cascia, was purchased as a home for the priest teachers and temporarily served as an administrative office for the new college. When an administrative building was erected, Cascia became a home for resident female students.

The transfer of land for the new college site was actualized in July of 1947. By September of 1947, amid the turmoil, 165 young-hearty men were ready to begin class.

In addition to its four classrooms and library, Guild Hall was used as an administrative building.

With funds made available by a mammoth penny sale at the Lawrence Memorial Stadium, the college gymnasium was erected. The gymnasium became the center of campus life, for it was used not only for social and religious activities, but also for classes.

Shortly after the construction of the gymnasium, contracts were signed for a new building on the permanent campus. By September 1949 the doors were opened to a modernly-equipped science building, Cushing Hall, named for His Eminence, Richard Cardinal Cushing, the college's greatest single benefactor.

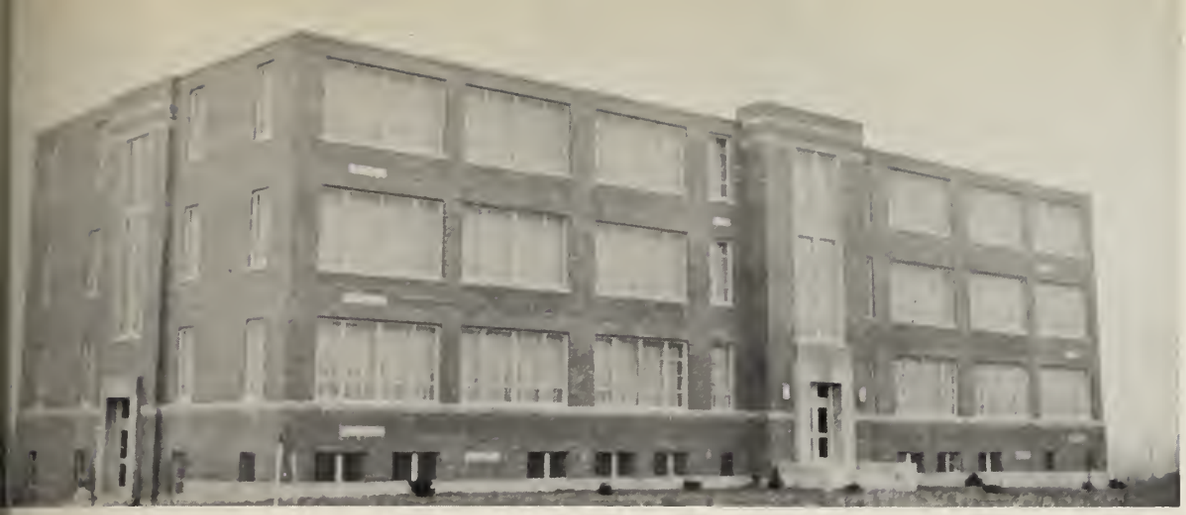
AUSTIN HALL

By the spring of 1949, additional funds were needed to continue growth. A million dollar drive was launched under the direction of Cardinal Cushing and the late Paul A. Dever, Governor of Massachusetts. With the proceeds of the drive, two buildings were begun. One, the Liberal Arts building, Sullivan Hall, named for the late Mortimer A. Sullivan, O.S.A., Provincial founder of Merrimack, and the second a home for the priest-teachers and administrative officers, Austin Hall, the name coming from the traditional contraction of the word Augustinian.

In May of 1952, the formal dedication of these buildings was made. It was at this time that the Cardinal expressed his desire to build a chapel on campus.

The Cardinal's dream was fulfilled when in April, 1956, he came to the formal dedication of the Chapel of Christ the Divine Teacher.



O'REILLY HALL

The College is grateful to Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Hamel of Haverhill for donating in the Spring of 1956 a statue of Christ the Teacher, erected on the walk approaching the Collegiate Chapel.

The Business Administration Building, O'Reilly Hall, named for the late Reverend James T. O'Reilly, O.S.A., outstanding church and civic leader in the industrial city of Lawrence, was opened in October 1958.

A private home was purchased near the college grounds in January, 1958 to become an infirmary shortly. It has been used temporarily as a home for resident students who have proven themselves mature and responsible.

In October, 1959 the center of all student activity was opened, the Student Union Building. One of the few student buildings in New England, it is at present being used for administrative offices, a chapel, dining halls, a coffee shop, and conference rooms.

Next September, two dormitories will be opened, one for men and one for women. The dormitories will be Y-shaped in Georgian Colonial architecture in keeping with the other building on campus. The wings of the dorms will extend from a central recreation area.

Board of Trustees

The Board of Trustees in any college is the least known body on the campus, although it is from here that the policies directive of the well-being of the institution emanate. Not only is a knowledge of academic problems necessary for these men who guide our college; an understanding of finances is also requisite. Without the Board of Trustees there would be no Merrimack College, no growth of its campus, no scholarships. For an infant Catholic college, a vast amount of knowledge must be accumulated to solve the monetary problems which necessarily beset it. The tremendous building program of the college, its rapid expansion during the past thirteen years, and its continued growth are all outgrowths of the great ability of the men who have directed Merrimack College through its formative years.

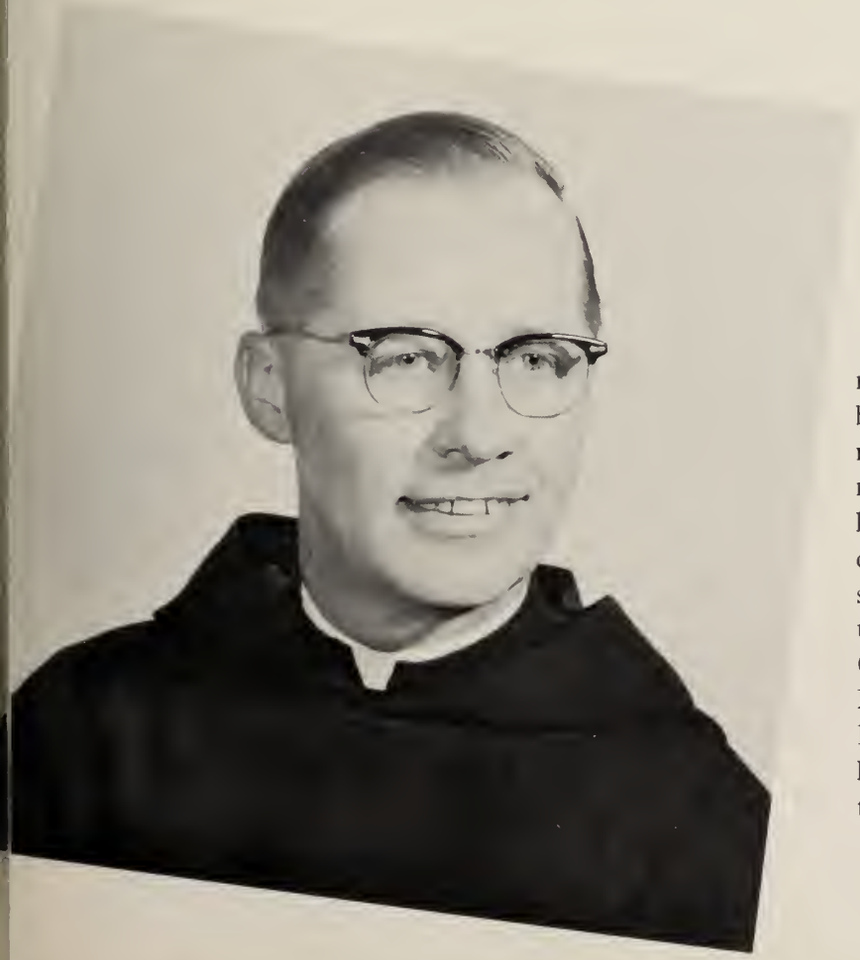
The Very Reverend James A. Donnellon, O.S.A., A.B., M.S., Ph.D., Prior Provincial of the Province of Saint Thomas of Villanova and Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Merrimack College.
Father Donnellon possesses a serious, earnest, and congenial personality, and his action and paternal encouragement have made possible the rapid advancement and growth of the College.

The Board of Trustees of Merrimack College meets a number of times during the year to discuss the business and governing of the college. Members are, left to right: Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O.S.A., Rev. Paul M. Judson, O.S.A., Rev. Edward J. Carney, O.S.A., Rev. John J. Daley, O.S.A., Rev. Henry B. Smith, O.S.A., and Rev. Thomas F. Walsh, O.S.A.

PRESIDENT

Thirteen years ago, a man was called from the campus of Villanova University to a barren spot of land in North Andover, Massachusetts. Since that day this same man, Reverend Vincent A. McQuade, O.S.A., has guided the college that he was called upon to found. From a small, two building campus, it has grown into a large institution whose students number one thousand and whose fame has spread down the eastern seaboard and west. The responsibilities of building, directing, and serving a college are never fully understood or appreciated. We cannot understand; we can merely thank him for Merrimack.

Administration



DEAN

Father Joseph P. Murray, O.S.A., was deeply admired by all with whom he came into contact long before he became the Dean of the Faculty at Merrimack College. Formerly the Chairman of the Department of Business Administration, he was known for his regard for the welfare of the students under his care. In return, student respect for the Dean was strong and unwavering. With the transfer of the universally esteemed Dean, Reverend Joseph J. Gildea, O.S.A., during the summer of 1959, Father Murray received the assignment of becoming the new Dean of the College. In the admirable work that he has been doing, the gratitude of the students goes toward him.

FACULTY

I had never known many Augustinians before I came to Merrimack College.
I had never known the warmth,
the understanding,
the helpfulness
that emanated from these men dedicated to God,
these men whose entire lives are given to us.
And the lay faculty—those learned men who have come from far and near to instruct us,
to confer upon us some small parcel of their knowledge.

As I sit here, I can still see the green ties on Saint Patricks Day,
I can hear the Priests cheer at a basketball game
and the Dean's quiet hello.
I can hear a shout for a field goal,
and the expounding upon the merits of Teddy Roosevelt or Teddy Williams.
These men, who wear the varied, brilliant-colored degrees from universities
the world over,
were our guides,
our inspirations,
through the years
that we spent at Merrimack.
They thundered at us the principles which underlie our lives and our faith.
They encouraged us to "Tolle lege"—
"Take up and read."
We can only pray that we will one day show ourselves worthy of the hours that they have spent in trying to impart to us their wealth of knowledge.

UNDERCLASSMEN

Do you remember when we were freshmen—
a little frightened, not a little wondering?
We were hazed by the class
gone before us,
the class we grew to love
after orientation was over.
Perhaps that is why
I will always remember
this year's freshman class.
We, the senior members of the college,
looked down and smiled
on that bewildered class
so like ourselves
years ago,—
the last freshman class that we would see here.
The beanies and buttons
that they have saved,
as we did,
will always remind them of their freshman year.

And the sophomores—
older,
wiser,
not quite ready to accept the responsibility of student government, but growing stronger,
more aware of school activities and duties.

Finally, the juniors—
plunged suddenly into maturity this spring,
as we were a year ago,
by the senior charge thrust upon them
by our class.
With the coming problems of school leadership blended the laughter of junior week.

The underclassmen,
our friends.
Can we ever forget those we have left behind,
those to whom we entrust our past,
our dreams, our memories?

FRESHMAN CLASS

The orientation period initiated the class of '63 to an intellectual and social world which was to be their's for the remaining years at Merrimack. With ideals of faith and honor as a basic foundation, the students that led the class through the year did their job in keeping the overall spirit of the class and of the college. There is no doubt that they established a strong precedent for the years to come. The class, by being ready and willing to tackle any task and doing it well, is fast becoming a credit to itself and to the college.

SOPHOMORES

The Sophomore year is a transitional one. It signifies the emergence from a confusing and fun-filled Freshman year to the higher classification of underclassmen. The Sophomore is no longer a stranger to college routine, but an experienced student who should be capable of putting activities into their proper perspective.

The primary function of the Sophomore class is to help orientate the Freshmen to their new and complex surroundings. A tradition has it, the Sophomores, previously subjected to the same treatment, may now impose the "regs" upon the first year students.

THROUGH DEDICATION . .

Upperclassmen now—a year of decision in studies and pride in college traditions. As Juniors they have determined their major field of study and must now learn how to measure leisure time and study periods. This is a time of greater participation in college activities and enthusiasm is evident in all their plans.

The Junior class is the mainstay of the school; its class events are many. No longer are Juniors inexperienced pupils but have developed into mature students in keeping with an active year—a decisive year—a year to remember.

ACTIVITIES

Will you ever forget the things we leave behind—
the Warrior office,
with its clacking sound
of the typewriter;
the applause rolling
over the footlights
to engulf the On-Stagers;
the sonorous tones of the Merrimack debators?
The days we slaved
in the Merrimackan office,
the long hours spent in rehearsing for plays and concerts—
they seemed so long then,
so tiring.
Do you remember how we used to complain about working?
And now, I wish that we could do it
all over again.
It is this that we will remember long after we have forgotten how tired we became;
it is this that made us mature,
made us learn to work with many people as a unit,— cooperating,
mutually aiding each other.
We argued,
we debated,
we compromised,
and in doing these things,
we learned how to live by Christian ideals in the world we have just entered.
The world we left behind will be the guide through our new lives.

Religion

The Sanctuary Society is composed of students who volunteer their assistance in helping the priests carry out the religious functions on campus.

This organization gives personal satisfaction to its members because each is taking a more active part in Catholic life as well as college life.

Members of the Merrimack College Sanctuary Society serve the Masses in Chapel of Christ the Teacher.

1959 marked the Silver Jubilees of Fathers Thomas Walsh, Vincent McQuade, the college president, and Henry Matthews.

The student body attends weekly Mass in the college chapel.

Sanctuary Society officers confer with Father Driscoll, the college chaplain.

Merrimack students listen to the words of guidance offered them in the annual retreat at the beginning of the school year.

N.F.C.C.S.

The N.F.C.C.S. is one of the most active and little known of the campus organizations. The Merrimack chapter is a branch of the National Federation of Catholic College Students, which unites students of Catholic colleges and universities across the nation in its programs of mission activities and Catholic Action. Here at Merrimack, the N.F.C.C.S. is under the guidance of Rev. John Driscoll, O.S.A., the college chaplain. Under his steady hand, the N.F.C.C.S. has grown stronger and become better known throughout the college. Its officers attend conclaves and workshops at colleges in the New England group. Mission activities, drives for charity, the yearly orphans' trip are all outgrowths of this enthusiastic organization.

The National Federation of Catholic College Students, under the guidance of their officers, handle the mission activities at Merrimack.

STUDENT COUNCIL

The entire Council meets on and judges college affairs.

To the body of duly elected class representatives, the Student Council, falls the duty of mediation between faculty and student. Comprised of five seniors, three juniors, and one sophomore, the Council meets weekly to alleviate many of the administrative burdens of the college. It carries out disciplinary regulations, manages class elections, and oversees extracurricular activities. The Student Court, whose authority is best seen during the period of Freshman Orientation, is under the auspices of the Council. During the past year, the Council inaugurated its Harvest Ball, the proceeds of which will go toward a student loan fund. The council is the balance betweer administration and student.

Officers Dean Quinlan, Joe Day, and Rollie Dion meet on policy.

President Joe Day confers with college president, Very Rev. Vincent McQuade, O.S.A.

Father Walsh and his group reach for a high note in a practice session. The real work of the society is done in sessions such as this.

Choral Society

The choral society is the oldest extracurricular activity on campus. Established first as an all-male glee club in 1947, it has expanded and transformed to keep pace with Merrimack's growth. No organization on campus works harder than that dedicated group of individuals who comprise the choral society. Frequent long but always enjoyable practice is required of its members, and under the patient direction of Rev. Thomas I. Walsh, O.S.A., the product of these efforts is always excellent. Several minor programs, performed off-campus during the year, culminate in the Fall, Christmas, and Spring Concerts, presented at the Collegiate Auditorium. It is with pardonable nostalgia that we recall the Spring Concert of 1959, at which our "Alma Mater" was sung for the first time.

The officers of the choral society, Pres. Bob Drummond, V.P. Josephine Small, Secretary Marion Gentille, Treasurer George Morgan, and Librarian Andre Turcotte meet with the moderator, Fr. Thomas F. Walsh, O.S.A., to discuss the expansion of the repertoire for the Annual Christmas Concert.

The pleasure of a song; sweet sound of music, sufficient reward for all our efforts.

Warrior

The editorship of the Warrior passed on to new hands in December of 1958. The time for expansion and development had been more than overdue, and the new editors immediately instituted a program which was to continue up to the present time.

The new system called for a strengthening of the internal structure of the paper, and increasing of the news facilities. Joe Nahil and Mary Flynn were the first co-editors of the "new" Warrior. It was under their leadership that the paper which had previously been printed once a month began editing every other week. The best thing which developed from the new policies was a greater student and faculty interest in the paper.

Dean Quinlan and Doug Flaherty took over the helm in 1959 and the growth of the newspaper continued unabated.

With two national awards safely tucked away, the Warrior seems destined to take its place among other collegiate newspapers.

Frank Leone, the energetic photographer for the Merrimack WARRIOR, looks over his handy manual as he surveys his equipment and puzzles over the picture assignments for the next issue.

THE OLD

It's time to put the Warrior to bed. The last issue of the old staff is given its last proof reading. And so "good night"!

Mary Flynn and Joe Nahil, retiring editors, and their staff, smile at the accomplishments which they have made and review with satisfaction a difficult task well done.

THE NEW

It looks as though the new staff is pretty well satisfied with its first community effort. Everyone offered a small Deo Gratias, and then the nimble fingers started banging away at the typewriters for the second issue.

The old and new editors look over the paper as it rolls off the press before it is passed on to the student body. Silence reigns (for a change!) as students peruse the pages of the Warrior for news of campus affairs and personalities, as well as editorial opinions and administrative policy.

the merrimackan

1960

Rollie Dion, Photography Editor, spent endless hours in planning and supervising the many pictures needed to complete the Merrimackan.

A portion of the 1960 Merrimackan staff who untiringly offered their time and energy and helped to make this yearbook depict the work, the fun, and the progress of four years of college life.

Last spring, the editor and staff of the 1960 Merrimackan began to work on the production of a yearbook which would be a tribute to our Alma Mater. This endeavor was to be our book of memories, the memories which have filled our four years of college life. The days to come will find us turning the pages of this book and recalling to mind these memorable years. Pictures of the chapel, academic buildings and gymnasium, of the various clubs and organizations, and of our classmates, will remind us of the people, places, and activities we so enjoyed. The Merrimackan will be a record of four years—swiftly, happily, worthily spent. And so this spring, following a year of long and careful work, we give to ourselves, to the underclassmen, and to the alumni of our beloved college, our book of memories.

The Merrimackan's big three: Rev. Ezra Fenton, O.S.A., moderator: Mary Flynn and Larry Griffin, co-editors.

Don Lamoureux, Business Manager, and Don Myles, Managing Editor, took care of the business portion.

The remainder of the staff put in long hours over pictures, captions, and write-ups.

Typist Norma Kerry, with Literary Editors Martha Roberts and Grace Puglisi.

On-Stagers

Louise Bernardin demonstrates the technique of make-up as the night of the On-Stager's production draws near. The make-up crew makes up a vital segment of every production of the Dramatic Club, and its members show their prowess at curtain time.

Club president Don Walbridge, with moderator Miss June Broderick, meets with fellow officers Josephine Small and John Wotjkun to discuss plans for the annual play. The On-Stagers also have contributed to the Variety Show, and although their achievements are capped in a few great nights a year, they work all year.

Backstage clowning is a part of every Merrimack College production.

Donn Byrne, head of the backstage crew, outlines and explains the intricate set arrangement to members of his crew. Long hours of planning are needed to produce an exact set.

Because of the disruption of the organization of the On-Stagers due to the transferrence of its moderator, Reverend Francis X. Smith, O.S.A., there was no play in the Fall of 1959. However, with the advent of Miss June Broderick as moderator, plans looked up considerably for the student actors, script girls, stage crew, and make-up committees. One-act plays were planned, and the spring was ushered in with a play in the Merrimack tradition.

Sigma Beta Kappa

The members of Sigma Beta Kappa are dedicated to performing service duties to Merrimack. A well balanced religious and social program offered by the fraternity make it one of the outstanding organizations on campus.

"Hit him again, Dick!" Sad is the life of a pledge.

The occasion is the initiation of one of the pledge classes. The "fraternity house" is always a good place to welcome the new arrivals. The opportunity to join Sigma Beta Kappa is extended twice during the school year. Any freshman or sophomore is invited to participate in the six weeks pledging. During this time, the prospective members are carefully screened by the brothers.

Members of the Carillon staff meet informally to consider manuscripts for publication in their magazine.

Carillon

The purpose of the Carillon, the Merrimack literary magazine, is to give the authors and poets of the college a chance to express themselves. Two years old, it is a great success.

Carillon officers discuss plans for the next issue.

Secretarial Science Club

For the hard-working girls in the Secretarial Science course, their club is a tremendous outlet. Besides guest speakers, who include men like Foster Furcolo, the club sponsors an annual Fashion Show and trip to New York.

The annual fashion show highlighted a weekend at West Point.

Secretarial Science students learn the clerical skills that they will need to make them the excellent secretaries that they will be.

A few of the members of the Business Club, made up of business majors of the college, look over with their officers the agenda for the year.

Business Club

The Business Club includes in its membership the majors in Accounting, Marketing, and Business Administration, and the four-year Secretarial Science. One of the most important events of the year for the club is the Student American Marketing Association Conference, held on the campus of one of the affiliated colleges. In addition, the club has dinner conferences where featured speakers help keep the members aware of current business trends.

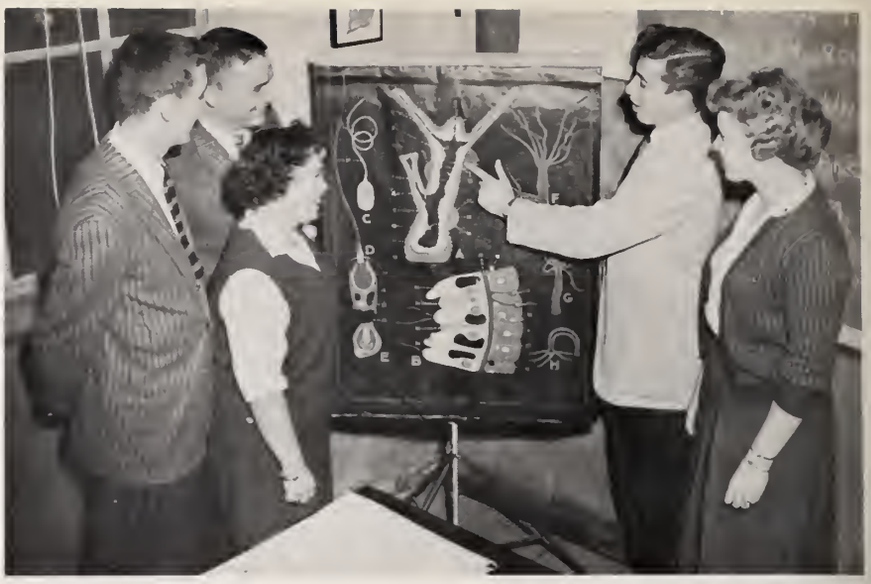
Accounting Club

The function of the Accounting Club is to augment and amplify the interest of members by maintaining lively contact with the business world. In their efforts to acquire a better understanding of the field, the Accounting Club participates in numerous field trips, attends dinners, conferences, delivered by many eminent businessmen, and discusses problems of current interest in the accounting realm. The Accounting Club also aids the library in acquiring new books in the accounting field.

The Accounting Club attends one of its many dinners. It is through these informal banquets that the club supplements formal learning with the experience of practicing accountants.

Caducean Club

Pre-meds study up on the latest laboratory techniques.



Caducean Club members survey a chart of the hydra as part of the club's educational aspect.

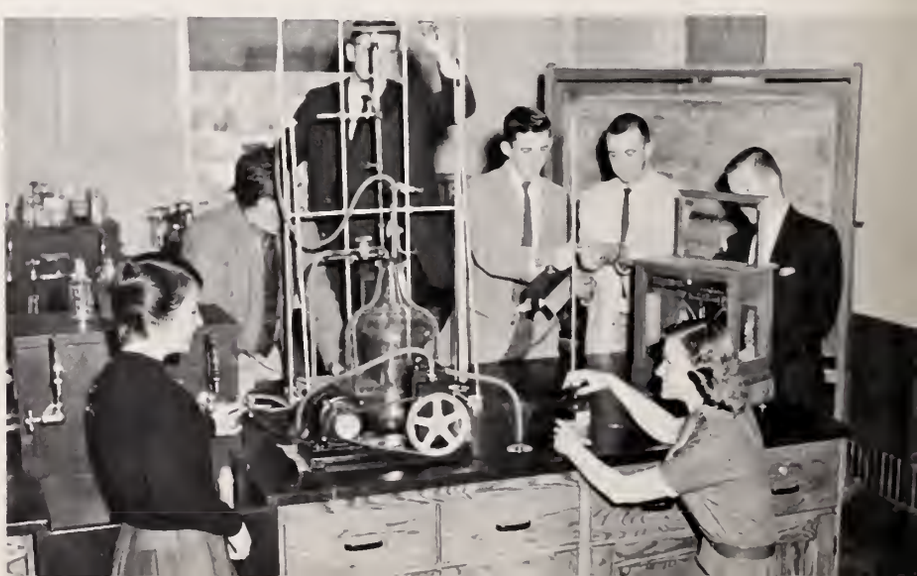
The Biology and Pre-Med Club, constituting the majority of biology majors on campus, has again successfully completed the year as one of the larger and more active clubs on campus. The purpose of this organization is to provide an outlet for desires and aspirations of members interested in the biological field.

The participation of students in club activities such as sponsoring field trips, presenting educational films, holding office, offers to the student those initial contacts with the profession that are not included in the college curriculum.

Benzene Ring

The Benzene Ring society, the Student Affiliate Chapter of the American Chemical Society, exists primarily for the energetic and enterprising student of chemistry. The Chapter offers an opportunity for such a student to become acquainted with prominent figures in the chemical world, to secure the professional stimulation that arises from various field trips, and to express his technical ability not only during student lectures, but also in the monthly publication, The Benzene News.

Benzene Ring officers plan club affairs and meetings.



The chemists of tomorrow experiment with reactions of various chemicals, and learn the techniques of their future profession.

Cultural Activities Club

The Cultural Activities Committee is a fairly new group on campus. Its purpose is to provide information on various cultural activities to be found in the area. During the year it sponsored trips to the opera, to plays, and to Handel's "Messiah." The group encourages students to take advantage of the vast amount of cultural resources at their command.

Tom Cyrs and Helen Comeau look over the agenda for the year with moderator of the Cultural Activities Club, Rev. John Driscoll, O.S.A.

Members of the club plan a trip to Boston for the group.

Members of the Literary Club find a more interesting way of learning literature than keeping only to their books—the phonograph!

Officers Rosemary Driscoll and Larry Kerig listen as President Tom Caffrey gives his opinion on matters theatrical and literary.

Literary Club

Under the capable direction of Father Joseph A. Flaherty, O.S.A., the Literary Club is organized to further the cultural development of the students. The club is mainly, though not entirely, made up of English majors who attend plays, listen to literary records, and read poetry, in order to increase their aesthetic appreciation of literature and the arts.

Senior members of the Education Club, the Aegidians, meet. Rita, Bob, and Marguerite compare notes on practice teaching.

The newly formed Aegidians, the education club of Merrimack College, is composed mainly of students who hope to teach after graduation. Speakers from the field of education acquaint the members with the problems and the joys of the vocation which they have chosen.

Christus Magister

Education Club

Sociology Club

President of the Sociology Club, Al Goebel, holds forth to members of the club on sociological developments of recent years.

Officers Midge Bresnehan, Betty Heenan, and Al Goebel try to get serious over the plans of the Sociology Club for the forthcoming semester.

Books are important in all fields, even in the sociological area in which much emphasis is placed upon experience.

The Sociology Club is an active club on campus. It has as its purpose, the fostering of interest in the Social Sciences and related fields. To achieve this purpose, it has noted guest speakers and conducts panel discussions. Moderator is Mr. Frederick Peterson.

Tennis Club

The Tennis Club is a group of tennis enthusiasts who are interested in improving their game. Besides speakers on the subject of tennis, the club holds a tournament for its members every spring.

Tennis Club officers discuss plans for the spring tournament, and then gain a few pointers on form necessary for championship tennis.

Political Club

The fall of 1959 saw a birth on the campus: the Political Club. The organization, numbering some 50 members, has made every effort to retain the ideals and strength of its late parent, the YOUNG DEMOCRATS. Under the guidance of Professor LeGendre, the club explores the undercurrents of modern, as well as by-gone politics with the ultimate aim of producing civic-minded, well-rounded Catholic citizens.

Officers of the Political Club, with President Bob LePlante, ponder for a few moments the campaign for nominations for the various parties.

"Point of order!" is the cry, to the amusement of fellow-politicians. Students demonstrate by their rapt expressions their interest in the working of political parties and comparative governments.

Officers Ann Flynn and Jerry Curcuru look over activities for the coming year. Ann, from New York and Jerry, from Gloucester, typify the many students from various parts of the country attending Merrimack.

Two at a time! It must be a crowded house!

Exam time for residents—and late the candle burns!

Sue Lizio demonstrates the dubious abilities of the resident girl.

Residents' Club

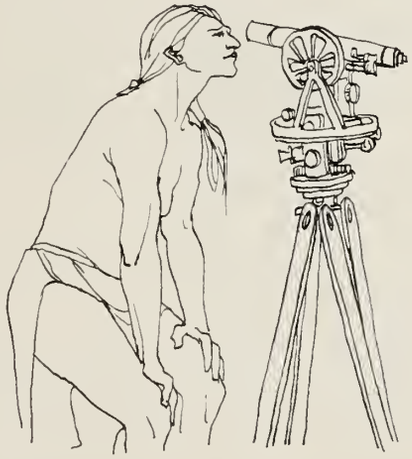
One of the greatest joys of college life, as every resident student knows, is coming home to a house full of students with whom problems, laughter, and sorrows can be shared. The Residents' Club is an expansion of the individual house into a large group of students away from home. The Residents have an annual dance and an annual banquet in the spring. This small but vital group of students is one of the mainsprings of student activity.

Engineering Guild

The Engineering Associations, the largest of the campus societies, are comprised of the students of the Merrimack College Department of Engineering. With forums, speakers, films, and demonstrations, they foster the interests of the engineers, as well as being the source of the highlight dance of the fall season, the Transit Trot.

The engineers are composed of two groups, the American Institute of Electrical Engineering, to which the electrical engineers belong and which promotes greater understanding of this field, and the Civil Engineering Guild, which is the organization of the civil engineers and whose purpose is much the same as its electrical counterpart. These societies, little known to the rest of the school because of their specialization, form an important part of the activities of the college.

Electrical engineers observe the workings of, and compare notes on, one of the many complicated machines found in the Merrimack engineering laboratories.



Civil Engineers Jim Ready, Mike Cervione, Myles Flaherty, and Martin Furey attempt to measure and resolve their difficulty by the application of the weights to the problem.

Debating Society

Debate Club officers, John Katin and Gene Kelly, plan intercollegiate meetings with neighboring institutions with moderator Mr. Robert McDuff.

Intercollegiate debating is but one phase of the Austin's work. Numerous hours are required to gather and arrange information vital to the establishment of a strong case to put before the opposition. A series of intramural debates help familiarize the debators with all aspects and interpretations of the given resolves. Professor McDuff and President John Katin consider alertness, forceful expression, and preparedness as the essential prerequisites for good debators.

Penmen

The Penmen, the society of the students of Merrimack College seriously interested in writing, is a new group on campus. The members submit manuscripts to the group, which reads them and offers constructive criticism on the style, content, and ideas of the authors.

The Penmen meet informally at the home of club moderator, Mrs. Yvonne Ground, to discuss the ability of Merrimack's student authors.

SPORTS

The cheers of an enthusiastic crowd, the slap of a racquet against a tennis ball, white sails on a foam-flecked bay—
things that live on in the mind.
The excitement of an overtime win
on the basketball court, the ice-spray from the skates of a hockey player—moments to remember always.
Names come back to me—
Liss, Levesque, O'Keefe;
Graczyk, McColgan, Hackney.
Rimas is on the boards;
Demers has slashed another opponent;
Day's skates flash across the ice.
Our teams have grown and strengthened;
our shouts have echoed across New England.
Now, we bequeath to the undergraduates—
to the O'Briens,
the Fueyos,
the MacDonalds—
the sports that have been so integral a part of our life at the college.
We can only hope that the student body will always cheer
our men to victory,
long after we have been scattered all over the country and the world.

Bob Dziadocz —gets ready to pass that ball, but where's his receiver? Lowell Tech is in for a surprise as Merrimack gets ready to march. Down the court the hardwood heroes come. under the basket, a quick shot, and another two points will be ours!

Bill Hart dribbles down the court hoping to get a chance at that net.

Tremendous improvement was shown on the courts this year by the Merrimack quintet. This was due in great part to the expert guidance of Coach La Rochelle.

Robust with youth, the team was comprised predominantly of freshmen and sophomores, who displayed amazing skill and aggressiveness, despite their lack of experience. With these ballplayers as a nucleus, the next few years of basketball at Merrimack should be loaded with victories.

Basketball

"Up and at 'em," you could call this, as Tech and Merrimack struggle for the ball. Merrimack gains possession and there goes big Archie MacDonald up for the shot! Will he get it That's anyone's guess, but here's hoping!

Hardwood Heroes

"Wimpy" LaRochelle takes the team into a huddle and plans strategy for the next minutes.

"Let's go, Merrimack, Let's go!" The cheerleaders, under captain Judy Pinnell, cheer the men of Merrimack onward. Adding prettiness and sparkle to every basketball game, the girls inspire the enthusiasm of the crowds and urge the Warriors to "beat that other team!"

Jerry Stopyra fights strongly to wrestle ball away from his determined opponent.

Captain John Rimas jumps and taps the ball high over his opponent's head.

Ski-mers

Ski activities once again got under way with the sponsoring of the annual Winter Carnival by the Ski-Mers. The highlight of the carnival was the Slalom Ball at which Pat Watson and Dick Kane were selected to reign as king and queen. The three days spent skiing on Mt. Cranmore proved very enjoyable and relaxing, with the selection of Father Walsh as "Most Advanced Skier of the Year" and Donald Lamoureux as the winner of the giant 1000-meter downhill race. All in all the festivities were most enjoyable and the only thing broken seemed to be the eating records.

A brief pause to view the beauty of the surrounding snow covered mountains. And then another trip to the top on the Ski Mobile.

Could you make this a quick picture please This is a very uncomfortable position.

The courageous skiers of the college stop for a picture and a quick bite to eat. And then, after waxing their hickories, they will once again attempt to conquer the many challenging ski trails.

Two on the puck, and it looks as though sticks may fly, as Merrimack drives to another goal!

Highlighted by Merrimack's first meeting with West Point in intercollegiate sports, the 1959-1960 hockey season has established the Merrimack hockey team as an equal to other small college teams in New England. The team, a blend of established veterans and improving underclassmen ably coached by Jim Reynolds, displayed a colorful brand of hockey in holding their own throughout an impressive schedule headed, along with West Point, by such New England hockey powers as Norwich, Bowdoin, Tufts, and Providence.

The Team—Front Row, left to right: M. Cassidy, Alternate-Captain P. Melchiono, B. Walsh, Alternate-Captain T. Treacy, Captain J. Day, G. Dunn. Second Row, left to right: Manager D. Fucci, T. Humphreys, G. Pollock, W. Daly, G. Reardon, H. Rowe, D. Cleary, Coach J. Reynolds. Third Row, left to right: J. Rooney, J. McDonald, T. Magner, J. Sullivan, D. Callahan, A. Lamphier, Manager W. Mareschalchi.

Merrimack gets set to score another goal, much to the dismay of the Wesleyan goalie, defense, and fans.

"Come on, you Warriors, fight for victory!" sounds through the rink as the men of Merrimack streak across the ice to get that puck. Below: Captain Joe Day crouches before the cage, ready to do battle with the opponents as his pucksters take to the ice for another win.

Alternate Captain Pete Melchiono pauses before the game for a moment.

Tennis

Coach Armand Gosselin and Captain Dick Sequin involved in a strategic conversation.

Bill Lever exemplifies the concentration which is required for this fast game.

Perhaps the word which most aptly describes the Warrior Tennis Team this year would be "improvement." Their record of 9 wins and 1 loss attests to this fact. The only defeat of the season came at the hands of a powerful Brandeis squad. The previous year, the Brandeis team defeated the Warriors by a score of 9-0. This year, as a result of the stellar play of Frank Pelczar, the margin was narrowed to 4-5. The mainstay of the team this year was José Molina who was ably supported by John Foley, Frank Pelczar, Captain Dick Sequin, John Cox, Bill Lever, Jim Jordan, and Larry Demers. These boys really did themselves proud as the .900 average indicates.

Larry Demers, one of the senior members of the Warrior Tennis Team, repeatedly came through with the all-important victory which helped put Merrimack in the win column.

Jose Molina, Merrimack's number one man, demonstrates some of the form and determination which made him one of the most feared men in college tennis circles.

Opponents found John Foley's serve extremely difficult to return.

Intramurals

Slide . . . another of the many close plays of the season.

Swing . . . says catcher Roy but the batter seems to disagree.

The merry month of May saw the commencement of activity in the intra-mural softball league. The battle for the championship was on. This sport provides an informal outlet for the student's natural competitive drive. The league is characterized by a sense of true sportsman-like conduct from which is learned not only how to win, but a more important lesson—how to lose. So in reality all the competitors become champions.

Last of the seventh, two out. C'm'on Jim, we need a big hit.

Softball

Intramural Basketball

Basketball is probably the best known of the intramural sports on campus. Played in the gym, the league games, scored by the girls from Cascia Hall, are close and hard-fought. The twelve teams in the league are made up of men who are not only interested in playing ball for fun, but also many of them are outstanding athletes striving for the prized first-place trophy. Good sportsmanship and team cooperation are instilled by the league.

High-jumping Ben Guzzone attempts to drop in two more points. However, the basket is well defended by his staunch opponents.

Big Bob Doran's jump shot is blocked by the long arms of his determined opponent; should have passed the ball, Bob!

All eyes and attention are placed on the two jumping centers, for as soon as the ball is tapped. the hard-fought game begins.

PROMS

Junior Week—1959!!
Sports Day,
Parents Night,
Coeds' Day—
I'll never forget that week.
The prom—
a Pacific island
splashed with silver sea spray and warm in the soft May evening,
gaiety, laughter,
murmuring gowns
against white jackets—
this was ours;
it will always be ours.
And the Dinner Dance in Boston—a magical end
to a magical week,
a week that belongs only
and foverer, to us.

Seniors we became,
and the Harvest Ball glittered through the falling leaves.
It sparkled,
for this was the beginning of the winter of our college years.
We had to sparkle,
to pretend that we didn't know that this was the last prom for us at Merrimack.
To pretend that we'd meet again and laugh together as we danced in formal clothes.
For when Spring came again,
It would be a new Spring,
filled with a hint of winter,
for, like winter, our year was ending,
and, like Spring,
it contained a breath of something new and fresh,
of something to come.

Junior Week

Junior Week begins with Mass in the college chapel.

Breakfast follows Mass in the auditorium, which is already in the transformation stage from auditorium to Polynesian island. And does that food taste good!

SUNDAY

Sunday—Junior Week, the last complete Junior Week at Merrimack College — came none to soon for the class of 1960, which had waited eagerly for weeks for the day that would herald the commencement of its own week, and which brought with it the dawning of senior privilege and responsibility. On Sunday morning, we knelt in the Collegiate Chapel of Christ the Teacher for Holy Mass, and later proceeded to the altar rail for the blessing of the class rings. When the ceremonies were completed, we all went in a body to the grotto of Our Lady for the recitation of the Rosary. At its completion, everyone retired to the auditorium for breakfast. There, the talk was all of the week that was about to begin — the anticipation of work and play, of laughter and splendor. Across the seven days before us lay all for which we had been waiting for three years — Junior Week, 1959!

Juniors gather outside the chapel.

Communion Breakfast

Father McQuade blesses class rings.

Time out for eating!

SPORTS DAY

The grunt and groan squad in action! All classes get into the act as the tug of war gets Sports Day started with a bang.

There they sit, waiting for the lucky winners who turn their talents from books to balls and bats.

Monday dawned clear, and we forgot solemnity and speeches as the boys got out their balls, bats, ropes, and shot-puts, and we retired to the fields for a day of softball, races, tugs-of-war, and various athletic events. The girls joined in the fun and soon the campus was ringing with the shouts of our psuedo-athletes and cries of, "Did you see that race Tom Landry ran?" There were champions and more champions as grunts and groans were the order of the day. That day, the juniors went home and collapsed, as they waited for Tuesday to arrive.

Bill Dwyer shows fine form as he attempts to win one of the trophies with a show of skill.

PARENTS NIGHT

On Tuesday evening, the juniors escorted their parents to one of the highlights of the week, Parents' Night. With the swinging sounds of Eddie Paladino's band in the background, the guests enjoyed a buffet dinner and watched several excellent performances of talented students — the harmony of three quartettes, the solos of Sally Ann Freedman and Claire Moreau, the high-jinks of Carol Gilgan and Louis DuPuis. Dancing topped a wonderful, long-to-be-remembered evening.

An appreciative audience of proud parents.

Carol and Louie give us their hilarious rendition of "Doin' What Comes Naturally"—a highlight of the evening.

Come and get it! Our parents get the full treatment as their eager offspring fill the platter.

Who said we can't dance?

Class President Fred Ryan and Vice-President Larry Griffin raise the flag as the junior honor guard and college officials watch.

DEDICATION DAY

On Wednesday, Class President Fred Ryan led the Honor Guard to Austin Hall, where, in the presence of the entire student body, he presented Father McQuade with the class gift. The raising of the new flag came, followed by the traditional tree-planting ceremonies.

Fred Ryan presents to Rev. Vincent A. McQuade, O.S.A., the class gift. As is the custom on Dedication Day, the junior class donates a gift to Merrimack: juniors gave an addressograph.

CLASS DAY

Ascension Thursday — day-off! Following Mass and a quick breakfast, the finishing touches were added to a hectic week of decorating. Then, off to the beach for a cook-out and a few relaxing moments before the big weekend!

You say the beach is cold, kids? This hearty group doesn't seem to mind as they brave the elements at Salisbury Beach.

"What, me worry?" "Never!" says Mary, as she comes through with a grand-slammer for the underdogs.

JUNIOR PROM

It looks like the start of a beautiful evening as juniors and their dates join the student body in dancing.

Polynesian Paradise

On their way to the prom, Don Lamoureux and his date, Mary Ellen Rourke, check on last-minute details.

Martha Roberts, the Queen of the Junior Prom and her court, Marguerite Kane, Sue Lizio, Mary Flynn, and Ruth Donahue, take a few minutes out to survey the festival over which they reign.

Co-Chairman Joe Nahil dances by the camera with Ann Marie Murphy.

Ginny Douglas, co-chairman with Joe Nahil of the Prom, and her date, Jim Dunnigan, class of '59, pause for a moment to observe the results of weeks of planning and hard work.

The pause that refreshes! The juniors may be hale and hardy, but a solid week of fun with a little work thrown in, makes feet that have danced through two straight nights want to rest a bit.

DINNER DANCE

The Dinner Dance—the end of Junior Week was drawing near. After this night, juniors would creep homeward, the most glamorous, most exciting time of their four college years over, just a memory in the pages of a lifetime. The Statler-Hilton Hotel glowed for us, and we danced amid the glitter of a night that we would never forget. Laughing girls and beaming boys thronged the floor, trying to prolong something that they knew must end, something that they knew could never happen again, something that they knew they would never forget—Junior Week, 1959.

A special request for Grace and Randy will be heard next.

A minute's chat, then back to the dance floor!

Co-Chairmen Betty Heenan and Bill Dwyer look over the schedule for the last gala event of the 1959 Junior Week. Those smiles mean—this is a wonderful night; this has been a wonderful week. Too bad it's almost over.

Class President Fred Ryan and Moderator, Rev. Thomas Walsh, O.S.A., exchange amenities at the head table just after dinner.

The song must be "Moments to Remember" for surely, this night of all nights was filled with them.

As Merrimack crowned a new social event, so also was a new queen selected to reign. Kathleen Carol received her badge of office from Joseph Day, the president of the Student Council. The cafeteria took on a festive appearance as dancing couples took the place of the lunch tables. The tables themselves, surrounded by the feminine splendor and beauty of the evening, never had it so good. Of course a grand march was the center of attraction led by Joe Day and Dean Quinlan.

HARVEST BALL

The evening was not entirely taken up by dancing, and some couples took advantage of the orchestra breaks to renew old acquaintances and make new ones. Since harvest is the time for reaping, these young people did just that, but their crop was happiness. Enough of this was reaped and stored to last forever.

The autumn leaves and jack-o-lantern world of fall was brightened by the Harvest Ball, the new formal dance initiated this year by the Student Council. The Jack Frost scene of the Student Union Building's new cafeteria was the place; Bob Bachelder's was the band. November 25, 1959—it was, indeed, a night to remember!

GRADUATION

And now,
we've graduated.
I know that, most of all,
I'll remember
those classmates of ours,
Leaning across a table
in the smoke-filled caf,
talking about the Red Sox;
dancing to Ed Palladino's band
in the gym;
trooping to Mass
on Friday mornings.
And suddenly,
before we knew it,
they were black-gowned
and solemn-eyed,
we along with them.
As the Chapel chimes rang out,
we turned to face the world outside.
The years rolled back for a moment,
and, once again,
we were freshmen with blue beanies on our heads, wondering what the coming years had in store for us.
We received the degrees for which we had worked so long, and so hard.
I wished somehow that this could begin again for me, for us, but I knew that we had a glorious future before us.
When we were freshmen,
we were frightened,
we wondered what would happen to us;
now, we were frightened and wondering again.
But as the Tenth Graduating Class marched slowly down the aisle,
I knew that somewhere,
someday, we would all look back upon this day,
not with sadness,
but with joy that we had lived it,
and faced its challenge.

What seemed unimportant once we will never forget.
